A SPRING OFFERING

That tells truly of the exceptional values this great enterprise, established for the sole purpose of placing in your homes satisfying furnishings at moderate costs, has been able to accomplish for you this season.

The designer of this quartered golden oak Buffet planned primarily for unusual room therein and succeeded to a surprising degree in attaining his end—not an inch of available space for the silver and table linen has been wasted,

The clear reflection from the heavy French plate glass doubles the effectiveness of the size of the top.

It has a full polish finish with full panelled quartered oak ends and the cast brass trimmings are thoroughly in keeping with the decorative design. $18.25

TWO STEAMERS AND A SCHOONER NEAR.

Ice the Barrier Which Held Back Vessels Hurrying to the Rescue.

Captain Moore of the Mount Temple Gives Complete Record of Titanic's Calls for Aid.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Two steamers and a schooner were only a short distance away from the Titanic when she sank, according to the testimony of Captain James H. Moore of steamer Mount Temple today before the Senate committee investigating the tragedy. Ice was the barrier which held back vessels hurrying to the rescue.

The Mount Temple intercepted the Titanic's call for help, Captain Moore said, and immediately he turned his ship's course toward the crippled liner. On his way he saw the lights of a schooner within a few miles of the scene of the tragedy and coming from that direction. When day broke, to disclose a great field of ice ahead, the Mount Temple discovered a tramp steamer close by. The identity of neither schooner nor tramp was fixed.

Captain Moore read a long list of messages from the Titanic intercepted by the Mount Temple's operator. It was virtually a complete record of the wireless appeals sent out by the doomed vessel and Senator Smith complimented the witness for his thoughtfulness in bringing it.

The committee has yet to examine a number of the British sailors who survived the Titanic's wreck and contemplates putting some of them on the stand today. A. Crawford, one of the stewards who was examined in New York, also is awaiting recall.

J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line, who has been waiting in Washington five days, attending the hearing from beginning to end each day, still is waiting to testify. He said today that he was not so important since the testimony of 25 survivors of the crew had been taken in one day by the arrangement whereby each Senator spent nearly a whole night examining them. He expected to take the stand again within a few days. The committee does not wish to recall him until it has cleared up all the points it can through the surviving members of the crew and those on ships known to have been in the Titanic's vicinity the night of the catastrophe.

Chairman Smith reiterated today the statement that no more passenger survivors would be heard until the officials, members of the crew and crews of other boats have testified. The four surviving officers of the Titanic are still held. Third Officer Lowe is contemplating demanding of Senator Smith upon what information he bases his interrogation of him as to his sobriety.

The committee decided early in the day to subpoena for next week F. M. Samuels, chief engineer of the Marconi company, and Business Agent Bottomley of that company; Operator Bride of the Titanic, who is in a hospital in New York, and J. A. Hosey, a wireless operator at Taunton, Mass.

Samuel Goldenberg and several others from New York, representing the committee of Titanic survivors, arrived in Washington today. Chairman Smith said they came to testify as to the whereabouts of Captain Smith of the Titanic and J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine, Sunday evening before the accident.

Second Officer Lightoller of the Titanic was recalled. Senator Smith questioned him as to his knowledge of the crew f the ship. Mr. Lightoller said he knew them all.

"Do you know Louis Klein?" asked the Senator?

"No, sir. There was a Klein, a second-class barber, on board. I knew him personally."

"Did he survive?"

"No, sir."

Louis Klein gave out a statement in Cleveland, Ohio, making sensational charges. He was brought here to testify and promptly disappeared. Lightoller said he saw Klein in Senator Smith's office and he was not the barber. The officer then was excused.

James H. Moore, captain of steamship Mount Temple, which was supposed to have been almost within hailing distance of the Titanic on the day that ship went down, next took the stand. He said he had been at sea 32 years, 27 years in the north Atlantic ocean.

"Are you familiar with ice and icebergs?" asked Senator Smith.

"Yes, sir; very familiar," said the captain. "An iceberg may be composed of anything. It is ice broken off from the land in the Arctic regions and may be composed of land, rocks and most anything that it would pick up in its course."

Senator Smith sought this information because of some levity caused by a question he asked several days ago, as to what an iceberg was composed of and the witness answered "Ice."

"How do icebergs look on a starlit night?" asked Senator Smith.

"White, sir. In fact, they are luminous."

The night of the Titanic disaster the sky was studded thick with stars.

"Where was your ship on Sunday night, April 14?"

"We were in latitude 41.25, longitude 51.14, at 12:30 a. m. ship's time."

"I wish you would tell the committee just what happened on that Sunday night and Monday morning," said the Senator.

"At 12:20 a. m. April 15," Captain Moore said "I was awakened by the steward with a message from the Marconi operator of my ship which said the Titanic was sending out a 'C Q D' message. Here is the message: 'Titanic sending C Q D. Requires assistance. Position 41.44 north, 50.24 west. Come at once, Iceberg.' This was a message the operator picked up."

"What reply did you send?"

"None whatever, sir. We did not want to stop those distress messages going out and the operators said the Titanic could not hear him. I blew the whistle at once and ordered the course toward the Titanic's position. I dressed and went to the chart room. We steamed up and sailed east by compass. We turned right toward the Titanic, north, 65 east true. Then I went to the chief engineer, told him about the Titanic and to push up the fires, wake up all extra firemen and so get them busy. I said: 'If necessary give the firemen a tot of rum, sir.'

"A what?" asked Senator Smith.

"A tot of rum, sir," Captain Moore replied, "to wake them up and spur them to action."

"At the time you got this message from the Titanic how far distant did you figure the vessel was from you?"

"About 49 miles."

The Senator asked what speed the Mount Temple made toward the Titanic. Captain Moore said a "trifle more than 11 knots."

"About 3 a. m. we ran into our first ice," continued the witness, "and we immediately doubled the lookout watch. At 3:25, ship's time, we had to stop. At that time we figured we were about 14 miles distant from where the Titanic signalled."

The Mount Temple was again delayed by a small schooner, the green light of which halted the Mount Temple. For a moment the captain got range of the white mast headlights and then they disappeared. The schooner was between the Mount Temple and the Titanic.

"How much nearer the Titanic was that schooner than you were?"

"Oh, the schooner could not have been more than a mile and a half from me. I heard the fog horn of the schooner and then put the Mount Temple's engines full speed astern to avoid her."

The captain said that after he stopped a few minutes to avoid the ice he proceeded slowly toward the Titanic. The schooner he saw coming from the direction of the Titanic was moving not more than two knots an hour. When he saw her at 3 a. m. she was, he estimated, about 12 miles from the Titanic.

Senator Smith asked the captain if he thought the light of th is sschooner might have been the light which Officer Boxhall of the Titanic and others on the liner saw when the Titanic was firing the distress rockets and flashing the Morses ignals.

"It might have been the light of a tramp schooner which was on her port bow. He passed to starboard of us."

"How large a ship was it?"

"About 5,000 tons. I did not get her name, ob ut she was a foreigner. She showed no ensign. We tried to raise her by wireless, but I don't believe she had any."

About 5:30 or 6 o'clock the Mount Temple ran into ice so heavy that she was forced to turn back. The last seen of the strange steamer was about 9 o'clock Monday, when both were trying to avoid the ice pack. Witness thought the strange steamer had a black funnel with some device in a band near the top. He went slowly after 3:25 o'clock and reached very close to the Titanic's position at 4:20 a. m. Monday.

"Was any other vessel there?"

"None but the tramp ship that cut ahead of me, sir, earlier."

The ice pack, said the witness, consisted of field ice and bergs. He said he counted between 40 and 50 bergs, the greater being between 100 and 200 feet high.

Senator Smith asked if glasses for the lookouts were useful in detecting the presence of danger ahead. The witness was not sure that they would be of extraordinary value. Neither did he think the use of searchlights during fog an dat night would lessen the danger. "It would be like throwing it against a blank wall. If the light was equipped with a powerful projector it might be of some use at night," he said.

Captain Moore told of arriving at the scene of the Titanic's burial about 4:30 in the morning, two hours after the liner went down. "I saw no wreckage and no bodies, sir," he said. "There was nothing but the ice and the tramp steamer. The ice was so thick that I was compelled to dist men to te masteads to see a lane out of to field."

The officer was asked whether he had heard that certain of his passengers had said they had seen rockets fired by the Titanic that night. Captain Moore replied that all the passengers were asleep, but that he had seen the statements in the newspapers.

"There were no passengers on the deck of the Mount Temple when we started for the Titanic," said Captain Moore. "I got all the officers on deck, got out the 20 life boats, had all the life belts out and was ready for any emergency. I reckoned we could accommodate 1,000 people in those lifeboats."

"We have only one wireless operator," said Captain Moore, "and he had picked up the telephones just before going to bed to see what was going on. The it was he caught the signals from the Titanic".

Captain Moore told of other messages

DR. DANIEL KIMBALL PEARSONS DEAD.

Aged Philanthropist Expires Comparatively Poor.

A Generous Donor to Many Small Colleges in the Middle West.

CHICAGO, April 27.—Dr. Daniel Kimball Pearsons, 92 years old, who in recent years gave more than $5,000,000 to small colleges, chiefly in the Middle West, died early today in a sanitarium at Hinsdale, a suburb, comparatively a poor man. Pneumonia, with complications due to old age, was the cause. For several days he had been sinking, a patient in an institution where he maintained himself on an income of $5,000 a year.

DR. D. K. PEARSONS.

paid him by a college to which he had contributed $250,000 on the condition that he would be given two per cent of that amount for the remainder of his life.

It was Dr. Pearsons who declared that "giving away money is a greater sport than base ball and more fun than any other form of entertainment." He began giving money to needy colleges in 1888 and, in sums ranging from $10,000 to $495,000, disposed of more than $5,000,000. His last gift, he said, left him comparatively poor, with an income sufficient to keep him from want. His death defeated his often-expressed expectation that he would live 100 years.

Recently he sold his home to go to the sanitarium. The value of the home and an endowment were given for a public library to Hinsdale, Ill., his place of residence. At the age of 91 Dr. Pearsons gave up a life-long use of tobacco making, he said, a renunciation for conscious reasons.

Dr. Pearsons was born in Bradford, Vt. He began practice of medicine in 1842. Coming to Illinois in 1857, he made a fortune in buying and selling Illinois farm lands. He was a Chicago alderman in 1875. His first notable gift was $100,000 to Beloit College (Wis). He gave Beloit in all $600,000.

Most of Dr. Pearsons's gifts were on condition that an amount equal to his should be provided by others. It was his way of stimulating philanthropy in others. "None of the rich colleges will get my money," he often said "only the poor ones, the obscure struggling ones up in the mountains or out in the woods, where the boy or girl living out at nowhere may get an education."

A GIFT FOR MARCONI.

Gold Tablet to be Presented at Benefit Performance in New York.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Arrangements for the Titanic memorial and benefit performance to be given at the Metropolitan Opera House Monday evening, for the benefit of the families of the Titanic's musicians will be the presentation to William Marconi of a handsome gold tablet, designed by Prince Paul Troubetskoy, in commemoration of the part played by wireless telegraphy in the rescue of the survivors. On its obverse side the tablet represents the Titanic heading toward an immense iceberg, on the side of which is the figure of a kneeling woman with her hand covering her face in agony. On the reverse appears the head of Mr. Marconi, heroically designed.

Child Welfare Conference, Planned to Become State-Wide Movement.

"Loan Shark" Cases to Go to the Supreme Court—New Home of the Providence Y. M. C. A.

A child welfare conference, to become a state-wide movement, composed of about 80 charitable and kindred organizations within Rhode Island, formed a permanent organization at a meeting held in Providence Friday afternoon. The object is to interest the people of the state in the welfare of the child. This is to be accomplished by the conference, which will consist of a series of meetings, at which experts in various branches of child work from different parts of the country will speak. The meeting will be followed by a big exhibit in Providence, beginning November 11, composed of children's work, having created an interest in the child. It is the purpose to promote their interests in many ways, such as education, social legislation, better child labor laws, matters of health and recreation; also to care for dependent, defective, neglected or delinquent children as well as children of immigrants. There were about 50 delegates present at the meeting from various organizations in the state, and the new venture was given financial support in the way of pledges amounting to $450. The list of donors follows: District Nursing Association, $100; Mothers' Congress, $25; Consumers' League, $25; Public Educations' Association, $50; Society for Organizing Charity, $100; Social Service Committee, $25; Children's Friend Society, $100; Providence Section, Jewish Home, $25.

The loan shark cases, in which two clerks in the Providence office of D. H. Tolman & Co. were arrested for violation of the laws against usury, were called in the Sixth District court Friday and plans were arranged to send them to the supreme court for a decision as to the constitutionality of the statute under which the complaints were made. Counsel asked leave to withdraw the demurrers to the complaints and file motions to quash. Elmer S. Chase, assistant city solicitor, told Judge Gorham that he had no objection and the court granted the request. The motion to quash the complaints raises the same questions as to the constitutionality of the law which the defendants attempted to raise by the demurrers. It is contended by counsel for the defendants that chapter 434 of the Public Laws, 1909, a violation of which is alleged in the complaints, is unconstitutional in that it is a contravention of article 1, section 5 of the constitution of Rhode Island, and works a denial of justice. It is also claimed that the statute deprives defendants of liberty and property without due process of law; that it impairs the obligation of contracts, and that the statute is not a reasonable use of the police power of the state. The usury statute also violates the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, which requires the uniform operation of the laws, prohibits special privileges and immunities, and deprives the defendants of liberty and property and the equal protection of the laws, according to the averments of the motion. The demurrers were withdrawn and the motions to quash were filed in open court by the consent of counsel, and it was understood that Judge Gorham would certify the constitutional question raised to the supreme court for a determination of the validity of the law under which the complaints were sworn out.

The new home of the Providence Young Men's Christian Association is to be located at the corner of Broad and Seekell streets Three pieces of property have been purchased by the trustees, having a combined frontage of 119 feet on Broad street and 176.8 feet on Seekell street, with a total area of 18,923 square feet. This gives a total of two and one third the amount of space now occupied by the Association building. It is the intention of the committee to erect a large, thoroughly up-to-date building. It is planned to serve school and employed boys, young men in commercial and industrial pursuits, as well as a large number of business men The first great difference between the present and the new building will be that in the proposed structure the dormitory facilities will be particularly emphasized, which could not be done in the other place. As far as location goes, the new site is even more accessible than the present one. It is but seven minutes walk from the centre of the business district, exactly the same distance as the present building. It is located within one mile of six of the ten wards of the city and within a mile and a half of all the wards. Double-track car lines on Broad street will make the building easily reached. It is but a stone's throw away from the high schools.

The proposal which has been pending before Congress in various forms for several years, to reduce the valuation which the government places upon the old postoffice building in Providence, was considerably advanced Friday, when the Senate committee on public buildings and grounds reported favorably the bill providing for the sale of the property at auction for a minimum price of $200,000. This bill has already been passed by the House of Representatives after receiving the favorable report of the committee on public buildings and grounds. The matter will now be brought before the Senate for consideration by Senator Wetmore at an early date. The property has been held at a minimum of $500,000 since the government removed to the new building on Exchange place.

Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts in a letter to Colonel Peter J. Gaskin, secretary of the Rhode Island Democratic state central committee, declines permission for the use of his name as a presidential candidate in the state-wide primary ballot to be held by the Democrats May 21. Governor Foss, after thanking the Democratic state organization for the request for permission to use his name on the ballot, explained why he declined to keep his name off the official ballot in Massachusetts under similar circumstances. In speaking of his refusal, he said: "A place on the primary ballots properly belongs to those who are conducting a canvass for the nomination, which, for various reasons I have not cared to do."

Thirty-five "pay-as-you-enter" cars have been ordered by the Rhode Island Company for service in Providence, the total cost being $227,000. The new equipment, which has been ordered in the strength of the prospective franchise for the Rhode Island Company, will begin to arrive early in June, if not sooner, and it is expected that all the cars will be in operation by the time of the completion of the negotiations between the city and the railroad company.

A special financial town meeting was held in South Kingstown Friday afternoon, when an appropriation of $5,000 was adopted with but little opposition for the purpose of laying a tar surface road in co-operation with the state, from curb to curb, from Dale Carlin Corners in Wakefield to Sugar Loaf Hill. The meeting was attended by more than 100 taxpayers, and included many of the leading business men in the town, who were deeply interested in the proposed road improvement.

Thirteen of 23 young men who recently took the bar examination passed and are now eligible to be sworn in as full-fledged attorneys-at-law. The successful candidates were announced as follows: John T. Bannan, Edward W. Bradford, Malcolm D. Champlin, John H. A. Griffin, Thomas L. Heffernan, George Hurley, John C. Knowles, Pasquale Romano and John J. Rosenfeld, all of Providence; Joseph A. Hammill of Bristol, Frank F. Mason of Pawtucket, Charles A. McGuire, Jr., Warwick, and Arthur M. Suprenant of Woonsocket.

For the second year Harris M. Barbour has attained the high honor of being granted the Grand Army of the Republic Fellowship at Brown University, the appointment being made for the academic year 1912-1913. The winner of the scholarship graduated from Brown University in the class of 1906 and three years later graduated from Newton Theological Seminary. He then returned to Brown to study for the degree of doctor of philosophy and last year was granted the Grand Army of the Republic Fellowship for high standing. He assisted Professor Everett in courses in philosophy and ethics.

The will of Mrs Louisa G. Lippitt of Providence contains the following public bequests: Rhode Island Hospital, for a bed to be known as the "George Warren Hallett permanent free bed," $1,000; American Unitarian Association of Boston, $2,000; at the death of the last member of the family the property is to be divided between the Providence Lying-in Hospital, the City Hospital and the Rhode Island Hospital, children's ward.

The will of Rev. James C. Walsh, late pastor of St. Michael's Church, Providence, includes a bequest of $5,000 to St. Joseph's Hospital for the establishment of a bed, to be known as the Rev. James C. Walsh Free Bed." The rest of the property, after some small bequests have been paid, is left to Rev. William Pyne.

Announcement is made that a wage advance at least equal to the increases recently given at other worsted plants in the state will be effective from now on in the three mills of the Centredale Worsted Company at Centredale, Stillwater and Oneyville.

REVIVAL OF WALKING IN ENGLAND.

[London Evening Journal.]

One of the satisfactory results of the strike has been a revival of the almost lost art of pedestrianism, with the health benefits which such exercise brings in its train. People who have hitherto been victims of the craze for motoring now walk a yard more than frequently not walked a yard more than was necessary, are now weary of the uncertainty of trains and strap hanging in tramcars, covering considerable distances on foot, and so saving money and gaining in health.

INCREASE FOR PAPER WORKERS.

Thousands Will Receive Advance in Wages Beginning in June.

BOSTON, April 26.—Thousands of operatives in the paper mills of New England have received information of an advance in wages. The American Writing Paper Company, which owns a score of mills in Holyoke and Miller's Falls, Mass., Manchester and Windsor Locks, Conn. announces that a wage increase varying from five to 10 per cent will go into effect in its plants in June. The Hampshire and Carew mills in South Hadley Falls and many other mills in western Massachusetts have decided to take similar action.

The International Paper Company, which has mills in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and this state, announced a wage increase some time ago, as did the Great Northern mills of Maine.

Several mills in Holyoke instead of advancing wages have adopted the so-called three-tour system under which the employes work eight hours in 24. The American Writing Paper Company will not inaugurate the three-tour system.

The three-shift plan will prove a more expensive change to the mills inaugurating it than the raise in wages, although the labor union officials believe a good share of the seeming loss will be made up by the increased efficiency of the working force who will be able to do better work in the shorter hours.

NEW YORK LETTER.

European Business Methods Said to be Behind Those of America.

Annual Fire Loss of $12,000,000—The Golf Ball a Deadly Weapon—Last Horse Car to Go.

[Correspondent of the News.]

NEW YORK, April 26.—Industrial and commercial New York is taking particular interest in what seems to be a case of "lese majesty" as the result of the testimony of a former subject of the kaiser to the effect that European business methods, particularly those of Germany, which have long been held up by "industrial efficiency engineers" as models for this country to copy are after all in many respects far behind those in use here. That the greater efficiency in the methods of production and manufacture followed by foreign nations is largely imaginary is the cheering conclusion reached by Hans Mendelson, a native of the land of the kaiser but now an American citizen, who has just completed an elaborate comparison of the methods employed in the two countries.

"Neither German farming nor German manufacturing is by any means the model of efficiency so many people think," says Herr Mendelson. "The low wages are unquestionably a temptation for a great waste of human labor. Many of the factories are antiquated. The technical supervision of the details of the factory processes is not so careful as here. Take the beet sugar industry for example, since it is common to both countries and involves both agriculture and manufacturing. It is true that Germany can produce sugar more cheaply than the United States, and that the removal of the tariff duty probably would result in the wiping out of the industry on this side of the Atlantic. But this difference is due, partly to the lower prices paid for the raw material and partly to the abundance of hand labor and the low wages paid for it in Europe, and not to the superiority of German machinery and manufacturing methods, as is often claimed. In fact I found the American factories more fully equipped with up-to-date machinery than those in Germany. In the West expensive automatic unloading devices are in use in all the factories. Such machinery is unknown in Germany. The technical supervision and detailed cost-accounting systems followed in the United States are not to be found in Europe. Americans have been lectured so much about their inferior methods by so-called efficiency engineers that they are prone to believe that they have fallen behind their foreign competitors in some way, but my observation is that their manufacturing methods in many respects really are superior to those followed abroad."

That more than anything else New York, to become a modern reproduction of ancient Rome, needs an up-to-date Nero to fiddle at its burning is indicated by the report of the fire losses in this city during the past 12 months. To what an alarming extent property is being wiped out here by conflagration is indicated by the report which shows that these losses aggregated for the period the enormous sum of $12,470,000, or more than $1,000,000 a month. More significant still is the fact that this figure represents an increase of nearly 50 per cent over the total of $8,591,000 for the preceding year. At this rate of increase the end of the present decade, that is the year 1920, would show an annual fire loss of about $200,000,000. The most important factor in this great increase seems to exist in the city's larger buildings, since although the loss for 1911 far exceeded that of 1910, the fires in the last year were less by 537 than in 1910, while the average loss for each fire in 1911 was $855 as against $596 in 1910. As usual, carelessness with lighted matches accounted for a large number of fires, 1366 in all. Lighted cigars or cigarettes caused [illegible] fires and carelessness with lighted candles 509.

To handle the work of protection the city now has 4,420 uniformed officers and men, and 560 civilian employes in various bureaus. Perhaps the best idea of what the fire fighting problem as it now exists in New York really amounts to is found in the estimate of the money needed for the maintenance of the fire department this year. It is $8,537,000.

The golf ball has been added to the list of deadly weapons, and now that the season is beginning it behooves golfers throughout the country to take warning from the fate of a local golfer and to refrain from too much curiosity as to how a golf ball is made. Of course many persons who have interrupted the flight of the "gutty" with various portions of their anatomy have for years considered it a deadly weapon. But in these cases it was merely a missile and not inherently dangerous. Now, however, it has been discovered that the golf ball must also be classed as an explosive.

This unexpected state of affairs was brought to light here because of the curiosity of a golfer to discover what sort of a liquid centre the ball with which he had been playing contained. In the easiest manner of finding out he was proceeding to vivisect it with a pocket knife, when it suddenly exploded, the liquid centre entering one of his eyes. As a result, it is feared that he may lose his sight although this will not be known until he emerges from the dark room to which the accident will confine him for several weeks. Just what the liquid centre of the ball which caused it to burst consisted of no one seems to know, although the effect was that of an acid or caustic which burned the eye in [illegible].

Whether golfers carrying a half dozen balls through the city streets [illegible] arrested under the concealed weapon law remains to be seen, but [illegible] that they have entered the category of explosives the game may take a new feature of sportiness.

A feature of metropolitan life which [illegible] has gradually been disappearing is soon to suffer complete extinction. New York's last horse car is [illegible]. The city has heard this statement made a number of times before [illegible] there seems to be no room for [illegible] in this case, since the information comes from the highest transit [illegible] in the city. It is not so many years since these horse-drawn cars [illegible] about in the heart of the financial district to say nothing of other parts of the city. One by one, however, they were replaced until there remained only two cross-town lines, and [illegible] known as the "belt line" which [illegible] encircled the whole of Manhattan. Recently the cross-town [illegible] put on storage battery cars, and [illegible] of all the old horse-drawn [illegible] are to disappear from the belt [illegible]. In many ways this line is unique, [illegible] undoubtedly the longest horse [illegible] in the country. Whether any passengers ever made in one of the cars an uninterrupted circuit of the island is not known, but it seems doubtful since such a trip it is said, would consume more time than it now takes to go from New York to Washington by fast train.

Probably the only persons to regret the passing of the horse in this connection are the drivers and conductors who as the result of long service still regard trolley cars and subways merely as new-fangled innovations in the field of rapid transit.

That the fourth of July in this city so far as the old-fashioned noisy and dangerous celebration is concerned, is practically at an end, is indicated by the fact that with the day still more than two months away steps are already being taken to make it even more safe and sane this year than last year. Indeed it is apparent that so far as New York is concerned the old-time jubilee of toy cannon, fire crackers and other explosive rockets with the concomitant list of deaths, missing fingers and general mutilation of the celebrators, to say nothing of the destruction of property has become a thing of the past. While this may cause woe to a large number of youngsters, the new celebration with games, displays of fireworks in charge of competent operators and other forms of entertainment for young America are calculated not only to keep the spirit of '76 alive, but also to work a valuable conservation of Father Knickerbocker's growing citizens.

THE FEARING COLLECTION.

More Than Eighty Exhibits Admired by Followers of Walton at The Club of Odd Volumes.

[Boston Transcript.]

Many of the rarest and most valuable editions of Izaak Walton's "The Compleat Angler" and his "Lives" together with manuscripts, portraits, prints and medals from the world-famous collection of Waltoniana of Daniel B. Fearing of Newport, R. I., have been placed on exhibition at The Club of Odd Volumes, where they will remain for about 10 days. Mr. Fearing's collection is exceedingly large and it was impossible for him to exhibit many items at this time, but he has selected from it for the benefit of the club members and their friends more than 80 exhibits of great interest to all book lovers and of especial attractiveness to followers of Walton.

Mr. Fearing is showing his copies of the first five editions of "The Compleat Angler." The first edition (1653), was printed by T. Maxey for Rich. Marriot in S. Dunstans Churchyard, Fleet street, and it is said that probably no book published in the last 300 years has so increased in value. Published originally at 18 pence, a copy now owned by J. Pierpont Morgan and bought in 1907 cost nearly $6,500. The second edition (1655) is much more rare than the first, though not bringing as high a price. The third edition was printed in 1661 and Mr. Fearing exhibits two copies, the 1661 and 1664 editions. The fourth edition (1668) and the fifth edition (1676) also are shown.

Besides these editions the collection includes the Septimus Prowett edition (1826), of which this is thought to be the only copy in existence; the first Moses Brown edition (1750), the first John Hawkins edition (1760), the first Bagster imprint and the first Major edition (1823). The Major edition contains an autograph letter of John Major and 14 plates engraved by Cook and Pye. There are various other editions of "The Compleat Angler," including the first Rennie, the Pickering, the only translation into a foreign language, a German book; the one hundredth edition edited by R. B. Marston; also the first edition of Robert Venables, "The Experience'd Angler." The frontispiece is by Vaughan and is a beautiful impression.

Many special, extra-illustrated and specially bound copies of "The Compleat Angler" are exhibited by Mr. Fearing, including that edited by Hawkins (1815) with over 170 old engravings, old portraits, colored views, sepia drawings and colored drawings. There is also the Winchester edition of 1902.

Walton's "Lives" is shown in the 1675 edition, which is the second collected edition and the first to contain Sir Henry Wotton's verses "To my old, and most worthy friend, Mr. Izaak Walton, on his life of Dr. Donne." The Life of Dr. Sanderson (1678), a first edition and a presentation copy; the Shepheards Oracles (1646) and several other famous editions are shown. Of books concerning Walton there is the "Twelve Sonnets and an Epilogue. In Memoriam, Izaak Walton Obit 15th December, 1683. By T. Westwood," bound in the original white vellum, of which only 20 copies are printed. There are also several bibliographies of Walton's "Angler."

One of the most interesting items is the facsimile of the probate copy of Izaak Walton's will and a translation in English script. Mr. Fearing owns the original of the will written on vellum and with the remains of the seal still attached. Two interesting holograph documents of Walton are shown and are supposed to be among the longest known. There are also autographs of Charles Cotton, Dorothy Cotton, Walton the younger and other contemporaries of Walton. A 17-line signed autograph letter of Robert Venables, dated June, 1648, is exceedingly rare. The autograph is scarcer even than that of Walton himself.

The Thomas Gosden silver and bronze Walton and Cotton medals, and the busts of Walton, which Mr. Fearing had made to celebrate his acquirement of the first five editions of "The Compleat Angler," are also exhibited. There is only one silver bust in existence and only 25 bronze busts were made. The portraits on view include the Edwards mezzotint printed in colors, a signed proof number one of the 25 that were made. There is a cigar box made from the plates from which the illustrations in the one hundredth edition of "The Compleat Angler" were printed and presented to Mr. Fearing by the editor, R. B. Marston.

NASTY YELLOW JOURNALISM.

[Philadelphia Record.]

A disaster such as the sinking of the Titanic, involving the wholesale loss of life at a point inaccessible to the newsgatherers and under circumstances necessitating the collection of relevant information from a thousand second-hand sources, taxes to the utmost the resources of the newspapers, and the performance of their task has in this instance reflected great credit upon most of them. There are, however, the usual exceptions that prove the rule. The yellow brethren are at their yellowest. There has been no limit to their mendacity in the days immediately following the tragedy, when lies were difficult to detect from the truth, and now, in the placing of the blame, there is no limit to their indecent vindictiveness. Individually and collectively the nasty yellows are a foul blot on the escutcheon of journalism.

DISCONTENT.

[Edmund Barss, in the Atlantic.]

Let me do something perfect before death;
Some least of things, so it be whole, and free
From any faltering touch; that none may see
One faintest flaw! that not one lightest breath
May dim the grace my sure hand fashioneth.
I know there is not any strength in me
To work this deed; oh, may Thy power be Fulfilled in weakness, as Thy scripture saith!

My soul is sick of half-accomplishment,
Of deeds that are no deeds, of victories
Uncrowned by triumph; stranger to content
Until Thou work in me some excellence,
That my heart may have rest ere I go hence;
Blind voyage across the bitter seas.

COAL SUBMERGED FOURTEEN YEARS STILL GOOD.

Although submerged 14 years with the Maine at the bottom of Havana harbor, coal taken from the wreck has been found to have lost comparatively little in efficiency. The Navy Department has just reached this conclusion following a test conducted at the experiment stations at Annapolis Md. The amount of deterioration was determined by evaporative tests made with coal freshly mined as compared with the fuel rescued from the bottom of the bay. "The loss in efficiency was less than 10 per cent," the Navy Department's report says.

PERSONALS.

....Benjamin F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy under President Harrison, was 82 years old Friday. He is strong and vigorous, and says he expects to be practicing law when he reaches the century mark.

...."English Jack," known by people all over the country who ever visited the White Mountains as the "Hermit of Crawford Notch," is dead. He was born in Scotland 87 years ago and his real name was John Vallee.

....Dr. Francis Bacon, an eminent surgeon and alienist and a recognized authority on yellow fever, is dead at his home in New Haven, in the eighty-first years of his age, after an extended illness. Dr. Bacon was the son of Rev. Dr. Leonard Bacon, a famous abolitionist preacher during the Civil war period, and was graduated from Yale Medical School in 1831. He did duty in the yellow fever outbreak in Galveston in 1872, until he himself was stricken; served in the Civil war as surgeon with the Second and later with the Seventh Connecticut volunteers, and was subsequently medical director of the army of the Potomac and after that medical director of the Department of the Gulf. He was appointed professor of surgery at Yale after the war, holding that chair until 1877. In 1876 he married Miss Georgianna M. Woolsey of New York, a Civil war nurse. Mrs. Bacon died in 1906.

....Friends of Isidor Straus, who with his wife perished in the Titanic disaster, tell a peculiar coincidence concerning Mr. Straus and his favorite horse Bess. Before he sailed for Europe Mr. Straus sent the horse to Bedford Hills, N. Y., where the Montefiore Home, with which Mr. Straus was connected, has a farm. Part of this farm consists of fine pasture land and Mr. Straus decided to give Bess a vacation and let her roam at will over the pasture until he returned. Bess was six years old, had been owned by Mr. Straus for several years and was his favorite driving horse. On the night of Sunday, April 14, she was locked in the stable by the employes at the farm as usual. Next morning one of the stable hands found her dead. A veterinary surgeon could not tell of what the animal had died. The night of Sunday, April 14, was when the Titanic was wrecked and Mr. Straus and his wife died.

How often do we hear or see this expression used in describing a beautiful woman!

Denude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head," one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff germ, checks falling hair and corrects generally, diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odor recommends Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

THE DORSEY PARDON.

The pardon of Allen W. Dorsey, the murderer of his father-in-law, Benjamin J. Burton, was a thing which the governor of the state should not have done. If there was ever a case where the sentence of the court should have been carried to the full, that case was Dorsey's. According to the evidence at the trial, the act was calmly premeditated and executed with the utmost coolness. Not only was the crime thus carefully planned and consummated, but Dorsey's wife and her sister were made participants in the act. No provocation for the murder was ever claimed. The women in the case have both died in prison, and if the principal is not likewise to end his days where the law of the state placed him, it would be as well to abolish altogether the penalty of life imprisonment.

While there may be no personal objection to the pardon of Dorsey as an individual there is objection to his release as a criminal. The principle is bad, and in this instance the manner of granting the pardon is especially undesirable, as on the closing day of the session of the legislature no time was given for any protest.

PRESIDENT AND EX-PRESIDENT.

If the ex-President were not pretty thick-skinned he would be sore from his head to his heels, for there is not much of his person which escaped the lash of the President in his Boston speech. Misrepresentation is a too common fault in political controversies, but considering the relations which so lately existed between Taft and Roosevelt the ordinary excuses and palliations of political vituperation fail to extenuate the colonel's pretense that in his speech in New York in January the President declared himself in favor of oligarchy or aristocracy and denied the competence of the people to govern themselves.

Far beyond the limits of pardonable misrepresentation is wilful perversion of facts. No one prominent in American politics ever charged so many other persons with lying, or so often invited the charge himself. Roosevelt went into Illinois and branded the President as a friend of Lorimer, evidently because he found in Illinois a strong anti-Lorimer sentiment, which he proceeded to utilize for his own interests. Yet 15 months ago Taft wrote to Roosevelt to dissuade him from an attack on Lorimer in the Outlook, because the President was convinced that Lorimer ought to be expelled from the Senate but the Senate was so sensitive to outside interference that if either Taft or Roosevelt openly antagonized Lorimer it would probably make votes for him. With this evidence that the President wished Lorimer driven from the Senate Roosevelt went up and down Illinois branding Taft as the friend of Lorimer, and to that chiefly is due the fact that he obtained most of the Illinois delegates.

With equal dishonesty Roosevelt has been denouncing Canadian reciprocity, declaring that he never would have sacrificed the American farmers by assenting to any such wicked scheme. Yet before the Canadian agreement was made public the President wrote to him about it, and the latter expressed his hearty approval and said he believed in free trade with Canada, which is more than the President negotiated, both for economic and for political reasons. After the agreement was published Roosevelt expressed his approval of it in two public speeches.

The President had no trouble in showing that at least as many political bosses favor Roosevelt as favor him, and that, so far from making full use of patronage in his own interest, he had left the Roosevelt appointees in office and many of them were working against him. He might have made this part of his speech much stronger. There is no doubt of the full use of patronage by Roosevelt in his own behalf in 1904 and in the interest of his chosen successor in 1908.

The trust prosecutions which Roosevelt has been denouncing as a menace to business were begun by his own Attorney General. At what moment did they become a menace to business? When Taft succeeded Roosevelt? When did Roosevelt discover that regulation and not litigation is the proper way of controlling the trusts? When he decided to seek the Presidential nomination? He is now confident that the dissolution of the Oil and Tobacco trusts was entirely ineffective; why, then, did he institute the suits for their dissolution?

The President might have pointed out that he is the same man to whom Roosevelt was paying honors less than a year and a half ago, but he did not. He did, however, recall that Roosevelt three times urged Senator Crane of Massachusetts to take a seat in his cabinet, but now that Crane is supporting Taft Roosevelt expresses a poor opinion of him. As soon as Roosevelt decided to seek the Presidency again he reversed his judgment of both men and measures.

The concluding sentences of the President's speech, which was thoroughly moderate throughout, related to the third term and will appeal strongly to every reflecting American. There are sound reasons for a practice which has prevailed without exception from the foundation of the government, and if there were no other objection to Roosevelt's candidacy the single fact that he aspires to that which the republic has given to no other man, which Washington and Cleveland refused to consider, and which even the commander of the federal armies in the Civil war could not secure, though the country was then full of old soldiers, would be a conclusive reason for not nominating him.

RHODE ISLAND FOR TAFT.

There seems to be no question that the Republicans of this state followed the popular feeling among the members of that party in endorsing President Taft for re-election and instructing the delegates chosen to the national convention next June to vote for him. The rank and file in Rhode Island is satisfied with the policies and administration of the President and believes it would be better to continue him in office than to turn the government over to former President Roosevelt, with his extreme policies and radical views concerning what ought to be done at this juncture. Not very long ago Mr. Roosevelt was extremely popular in this state, as throughout the country, but that sentiment has undoubtedly been largely changed by his recent utterances and his attitude toward the present administration and toward public affairs. The course which he has pursued has alienated many of his former followers and supporters and they are now afraid to give him the power which he craves in national official affairs.

Congressman Utter struck the key-note of the situation at the convention, when he said it is a different Roosevelt who is today appealing to the voters for their suffrages from the one who sat in the chair of the chief executive of the United States four years ago. That is true, and so true that it is difficult for many of the former friends and ardent supporters of the ex-President to recognize him in his new guise or to follow him in his wanderings from the positions and principles which he formerly enunciated and carried out. It is not difficult to imagine that if Roosevelt had remained true to his old-time convictions and principles and had not attacked his former friends, and particularly the present administration, as bitterly as he has he might easily have received the nomination of his party next June instead of President Taft. Now he has aroused antagonism by his radical views and his bitter opposition to the party leaders and lost very many of his friends among them being so many from this state that there was no question of the endorsement of the President at the convention.

It is quite conceivable, too, that if former President Roosevelt had not changed so completely from his old self to this new guise he might at the Republican convention just held in this state have received the unanimous endorsement of the delegates instead of President Taft, though Rhode Island on general principles is accustomed to stand by the party administration. There was, however, in this state in the old days a large following for Roosevelt, and it might have been strong enough to have secured his endorsement in the convention. Under the changed conditions and the present attitude of Colonel Roosevelt toward the party and the administration he had so little chance of even a word of support that there was entire unanimity and the convention was tame and colorless, and even lacking in any particular display of enthusiasm. In fact, so little interest was taken in the proceedings, because of the confidence that the administration would be endorsed, that not a handful of spectators were in the hall.

How the Republicans of Rhode Island stand as between President Taft and former President Roosevelt was well shown by the applause which greeted all references to the former and all allusions against the latter. There was no question that the delegates were favorable to Taft or that they are disappointed in Roosevelt and have no confidence in him as a leader for the party. That this feeling expressed that also of the large majority of the members of the party throughout the state cannot be doubted, and hence the will of the people was well performed by the convention members. Rhode Island is actually and officially for President Taft as a result of this convention, and the delegates will go to Chicago next June pledged to support him for the nomination, and in so doing will carry out the will and wishes of the Republicans of the state.

A new tax law, the appointment of a public utilities commission, an act for a state board of control and supply, having charge of the expenditures of money at several of the state institutions; provision for a constitutional convention, a workingmen's compensation law, an act providing state aid for industrial education in cities and towns, biennial elections for several cities and towns, laws providing for the abatement of the smoke nuisance and regulating fraternal insurance societies in the state, and a number of vital incorporation acts are the principal measures passed by the General Assembly—an excellent record in many respects. The lavish expenditure of the state's money cannot be altogether satisfactory to the people and the large increase of officials in the creating of many commissions at good salaries has been accomplished with a too free hand. But no legislature can be entirely good.

Colonel Roosevelt fairly outdid himself in his speech at Worcester in denunciation of President Taft, declaring that the latter has not given the people a "square deal," but owing to a "quality of feebleness" has "yielded to the bosses and the great privileged interests"; that the President "has not merely in thought, word and deed been disloyal to our past friendship, but has been disloyal to every canon of ordinary decency and fair dealing such as should obtain even in dealing with a man's bitterest opponents"; and much more of the same sort. It would be well for Roosevelt if the campaign for the Presidential nomination could be ended at once. He is fast coming to be fairly beside himself.

The statement by the captain of steamer California to the effect that rockets could not be seen 19 miles away will hardly be accepted by people who follow the sea. Block Island may be seen from the Ocean Drive on many clear days and rockets sent up on the island should easily be seen at night with the atmospheric conditions at all satisfactory. Equally surprising is the statement that his officers reported rockets, but that they were not rockets of distress. What is a distress signal at sea? Must a rocket spell something?

President Taft has gone into the fight against Colonel Roosevelt with evident reluctance, but once in he seems to be making the most of it. In his speech in Newark he said: "In ordinary circumstances it is not dignified for the President of the United States to enter into a personal controversy. But I am forced against the wall, with my back to it, and I'm bound, if I have any manhood in me, to fight back." And he is fighting.

The General Assembly has finally adjourned. It passed some desirable legislation, but as usual crowded its last days with matters the importance and significance of which no one has yet been able fully to learn. Some of the finer points of this legislation will undoubtedly develop in the future.

The police commission bill was allowed to die in committee. Newport needs a change in its administration of police affairs, but possibly the voters will decide to make the change themselves in December.

THE GROWTH OF MILWAUKEE SOCIALISM.

[Boston Transcript.]

There has been a deal of unwarrantable jubilation over the defeat of the Milwaukee Socialists in the last election. The fact is that, although the Socialists failed to elect their ticket, they polled a larger number of votes than in the preceding election, when they were successful. They were defeated by a combination of the other parties against Socialism. The votes in recent elections are given by the New York Independent. The Socialists were not in a majority two years ago, when they elected their candidate for mayor; he was elected by a plurality which was a good deal less than a majority. This time the other parties united against the Socialists and swept the field by a majority of 12,524. But this was no very serious defeat for Socialism; for against that party all the old parties combined, and the vote of 39,209 for the Social Democrats against 43,061 for the coalition was itself meaningly large. They never cast so many votes before. In 1905 they polled 16,837 votes; 20,857 votes in 1908; 27,668 in 1910; and now 39,209 in 1912. Here was a steady gain. On the other side, the combined vote of the two opposing parties showed no such steady gain. In 1906 they cast 44,182 votes; 41,517 in 1908; 321,672 in 1910; and now 43,054 in 1912; less than they cast in 1906, although the registration in the meantime had risen from 78,670 to 80,802.

It is further to be noticed that the condemnation of Socialism by the Catholic Church has had little or no effect, for the Socialist vote has been chiefly from the laboring class, which is predominantly Catholic. They do not propose, any more than the people of Ireland, to get their politics from Rome. Socialism in Milwaukee is not crushed by this defeat. Only an extraordinarily good municipal government under Mayor Seidel, and the maintenance of the non-partisan coalition, can keep the Social Democrats out of power in 1914.

TAFT AND ROOSEVELT.

Characterization of These Two Men So Opposite in Temperament and in Equipment for Life.

[William Allen White, in American Magazine.]

The tendency of men to admire traits that they do not possess is well marked in human nature. It is the basis of friendships between so-called opposites. Probably this tendency was the basis of the almost life-long friendship that has existed between William H. Taft and Theodore Roosevelt. For if ever two men were opposites in temperament and in equipment for life these two men are opposites. As a man and as a citizen the qualities that each possesses are praiseworthy; Mr. Taft's caution, his judicial indecision, his habit of waiting until the last bit of testimony is before him, in forming his opinions, and his insistence upon applying rule and precedent to all his important transactions, are as excellent human qualities as are Mr. Roosevelt's intuitive way of taking short cuts to his decisions, and his insistence upon applying moral standing rather than those of rule and precedent, in reaching his conclusions. Men of these different temperaments often do first-rate team work together. Each alone may do a big important work. In small matters these contrasting traits in men are lost in the tracery of life, and make up the charm of variation in the pattern of the passing day. But when men of exactly these traits find themselves opposed in the leadership of men in a large way, their opposing points of view divide their followers into factions and parties and schism, that are fundamentally asunder. This is what has happened in the United States within the four years last past.

Nominally President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt are contending for leadership of one party. Practically their contrasting traits of character have attracted followers who view life at angles so diametrical that these two men are in fact and in truth leading factions of a party so widely separated that neither faction can hope to win at the election, after winning at the nominating convention, by getting the other faction, but only by attracting men of like temperament. A vital point outside their party is Mr. Taft is nominated he can hardly expect to win back the followers of Colonel Roosevelt; Mr. Taft must rely upon the conservative Democrats to join the conservative Republicans in supporting him. Colonel Roosevelt similarly may look for the ardent and conscientious supporters of Mr. Taft to rally to some conservative Democrat, leaving Colonel Roosevelt if he is nominated, to appeal to the independent progressive vote of the country to repair the loss that he will sustain by the defection of the reactionaries.

THE MAY MAGAZINES.

In the Hampton Magazine for May Edward S. Curtis, who has devoted 14 years to an exhaustive personal photographic study of the Indians has an article on "The Vanishing Red Man," with illustrations from photographs. In addition, Mr. Curtis, in an interview by Mr. Edward Marshall, presents many intelligent observations with respect to the disappearing Indian. The legislative record of Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey is reviewed by Thomas N. McCarter in an article entitled "Advanced Legislation of Governor Wilson." Mr. McCarter has been attorney general of New Jersey and is president of one of the largest corporations of the state.

William A. Pinkerton writes entertainingly in answer to the question "Is There a Criminal Class?" H. Addington Bruce, a well known investigator in psychology and kindred subjects, writes an illuminating article on "Why I Believe in Telepathy." Edward Lyell Fox in an article entitled "Rehearsing Base Ball" writes about the methods of training, the expenses and profits of base ball and salaries of players. Among the "Personalities" is an interesting description of Senator Dixon of Montana, the manager of the political campaign of Colonel Roosevelt. Another prominent personage who is discussed is Talcott Williams, head of the new Pulitzer school of Journalism at Columbia University. There are stories by Arthur Stringer, who writes "The Mystery of the Churchill Pearls;" George Allan England, author of "Hill January," a story with plenty of "go" to it; Wells Hastings, in a delightful tale "Incorrigible James;" Angela Morgan, in a tale of a sanatarium, "Psychological Cupid," and Arthur Henry, who concludes his story "The Wrath of Jehovah."

The May New England Resorter is a fishing number—distinctly so. Thomas F. Anderson's article, "First Aid to the Angler," is an exposition of the opportunities for the angler in New England's pools and streams, from the headwaters of the Penobscot and Kennebec to the many little trout brooks in Connecticut and Rhode Island. It tells the very best places for finding the favorite game fish, together with the legal restrictions which effect it this year. Then there is George Story Hudson's "The Angler's Ammunition," an authoritative inventory of the tackle which should be taken along, an article which both professional and amateur will appreciate.

"The Lure of New England," by John C. Daggett, tells, in entertaining style, the three essential reasons why New England is pre-eminent as the playground of America. Alfred E. McCleary's "Quaint Old Cape Cod" unfolds the interesting story of the evolution of a race of hardy fishermen into a great community of summer-guest entertainers. "With New England Resorters" tells where New England's best people are spending the summer, and what they are doing. There are a score and more of pictures of fishing and recreation scenes, society figures, the latest styles in hats and gowns and a woman's department which has in it the little things in dress and fancy which make up a woman's world.

The Resorter makes its bow in an attractive dressing. Its cover—"Susanne," the May Resorter Girl—is by Chase Emerson, a noted Boston artist.

... was built in 1884 at Wilmington, Del., is of 316 tons, 173 feet long, 23 beam and 12.6 draft and has 1,200 horse power engines and a crew of 27. She was flagship of the New York Yacht Club for the years 1886-1893, when Commodore Gerry was at its head, and has probably had more parties of guests on board and done more running around at yacht races and other functions where yachts have gathered than any other ever in commission. The commodore was always anxious to do what he could to help things along, and even if he were not commodore the yacht has always been ready for regatta committees for races and always carried out parties of guests. If there was anything going on and the Electra was in commission she was sure to be on hand. Right up to the end she was always in the best of condition and able to make a good showing, even compared to larger and more modern boats. The Commodore believed in keeping her up in every way and even had wireless on board.

Commodore Gerry may have another steam yacht under charter this season, and he may not. He is retaining the launches, which are all able craft and have been put in condition for the season.

NO TENNIS TODAY.

Rain Interferes With the High School Tournament But Good Progress Already Made.

Good progress was made Friday in the Rogers High School tennis tournament. Four matches were played, leaving but four more in the first and second rounds, which would have been finished today but for the rain. Tennis will come under the same scholarship ruling as other school athletics and some of those playing in the tournament could not play on the team, but it is not expected that they will reach the final rounds.

In the first match Friday F. I. Marshall defeated J. B. Cottrell in the best contest of the afternoon. The players were on even standing, but both were out of practice. Marshall took the first set, 6-3, but in the second Cottrell forced the play, and although Marshall once had the match by one point only, Cottrell took the game and the three following, running the set to 8-6 at the end, in Marshall's favor.

In L. H. Hobbs vs. C. F. Arnold, Hobbs won by a 6-1, 6-1 score. Arnold showed that he could play tennis as well as other sports, but was not equal to Hobbs.

J. S. Brown, Jr., triumphed over H. S. Wheeler, 6-2, 6-2, Brown using his "Bundy" service and smashing drives to good advantage.

The last match saw E. Holloway go down to defeat from Stirling Lawton. Holloway could not take a game, and Lawton took both sets by love scores, 6-0, 6-0.

The matches which would have been played today, but were postponed until Monday because of the rain, will be between Baker and Harrison, King and Wyllie, Sayer and Robson, and Dring and Sheffield. The matches to date have been refereed by Brown, Hobbs, Ward, Bowler and Sherman.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Some of the flags are still at half-staff. Some have never come down, not even at night.

—Work has been started on the cellar for the new addition to the Redwood Library.

—Mrs. Joseph G. Parmenter entertained at whist Friday evening at her home on Mt. Vernon street.

—Mrs. David King returned from Europe on the Adriatic and is at the Hotel Belmont in New York.

—Miss Emily Hughes, who has been at Palm Beach, Fla., during the winter, will arrive in Newport about May 1, for the summer.

—The new administration of the grounds at the Casino is in evidence in the receipt of two rollers, one horse and one hand, for the lawn.

—A number of big tugs, including the Salutation, Cheektowaga, Battler, Minnie and Resolute, and steamer Rowe are tied up at the docks, awaiting better weather.

—Contractor Cunningham, who is doing the plastering at the new St. Joseph's Church, has been at work more than two months and has the big job more than half done.

—The Acker, Merrall & Condit Company has begun to move into its new quarters in the Coggeshall building and it looks today as if there was more stock in the new store than in the old.

—The Queen's Daughters having secured permission through the General Assembly for the use of the state armory for their social, are now making preparations to decorate the hall for the occasion.

—The magnolia trees on the Government Landing are just ready to bloom, the buds standing well out. The other shrubbery on the Landing is also well along with its spring dress and will soon make a pretty showing.

—Captain Ambrust of steamer General Richard Arnold has supplied his craft with life preservers wherever he could find a place to stow them. He thinks a government boat should make at least as good a showing in this line as one privately owned.

—A. O'D. Taylor has sold for the Gibbs Land Company a lot on the easterly side of Prairie avenue, containing 5126 square feet, to George F. Ward. This sale disposes of all of the Gibbs Land Company's holdings between Champlin and Catherine streets, along Prairie avenue.

—There were quite a number of young children gathered about a theatre box office this afternoon, wondering why they could not secure tickets for admission. They were unquestionably under the age limit of the law and were not accompanied by grown persons.

—The weather rather put a damper on base ball today. The rain soaked an already super-soaked ground and made it unfit for play. The Rogers High-State College Freshmen game was cancelled an dthe game between the Trojans and Fort Adams, who were to open the Wellington Park grounds, is also apparently off.

—There were some differences in thermometer readings today. That one at fire department headquarters read 54 this afternoon and at the same time the one at The News office read 50. There is quite a difference there but the fire department thermometer is close to the ground and the ground is no longer a cold storage depot.

—At the entertainment to be given in the gymnasium of the Army and Navy Young Men's Christian Association this evening a delegation of the crew of German cruiser Bremen will be present as guests. The principal feature will be a concert and entertainment by H. E. Howard, impersonating "The Bugler and the Drummer Boy."

—Scup's come again, C. B. Anderson's men an da good-sized one from the Coddington cove trap this afternoon. This is the third catch reported. On the twenty fourth J. E. Clarke at Point Judith had seven, on the twenty fifth P. Tourgee at the west bay had one an don the twenty seventh C. B. Anderson at Coddington cove had one. Total catch, 9.

IN TWO DIVISIONS.

Four Major and Nine Minor Teams in Grammar School League.

Outline of Proposed Activities in Base Ball and Track and Field Games.

A meeting of the directors of the Grammar School Base Ball League comprising the principals of the various schools or their representatives, was held Friday afternoon at the Young Men's Christian Association. Base ball was the first and chief matter taken up, 13 teams being heard from. There were four major—Coddington, St. Joseph's, Cranston and St. Mary's—and nine minor, Coddington, St. Joseph's, Lenthal, Thayer, Clarke, Potter, Calvert, Mumford and Coggeshall. The next step will be to elect captains and next Tuesday the captains will meet with Physical Director Slocum and receive instructions.

Physical Director Slocum also presented an outline of activities for the year, for the directors' approval. Among other things it suggested the endorsement of the following program of sports: Soccer football and a cross-country run in the fall; basket ball in the winter, base ball and track and field meet in the spring.

The outline states further: its object shall be to promote and administrate athletics among grammar school children of Newport. Its aim shall be to develop the manly qualities of courage, loyalty, honor and physical vigor through the agencies of athletics, rather than to develop athletics through the agency of boy life.

Base Ball.

The base ball league conducted by the Newport Grammar School Athletic League shall be under the direction of the executive officer. Protests shall be decided by him. An appeal from his decisions may be made by a number of the board of directors. Such appeals shall be disposed of by the directors.

The leagues shall be in two divisions known as the major and the minor. The major league shall be composed of those schools having eighth and ninth grades. The minor league shall be composed of those schools having grades seven and six.

Each team shall be limited to 15 players. No player who has been a member of a major league team shall play with a minor league team during the same season, or vice versa. All players shall be certified as eligible by the principal of the school. Changes may be made in list of players only upon request of the principals.

Track and Field Games.

The track and field games of this league shall be under the direction of the executive officer. The games shall be conducted according to the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union, as printed in their handbook, subject to the rules of this league. At least one set of games shall be held at a proper time during the spring months.

Competitors shall be divided in classes according to weight. The divisions shall be as follows: A, over 110 pounds; B, over 90 pounds and under 111; C, over 75 pounds and under 91; D, under 75 pounds.

The events to be contested shall be as follows, subject to change by the executive officer:

Division A—100-yard dash, running high jump, eight-pound shot put, running hop, step and jump.

Division B—75-yard dash, running high jump, eight-pound shot put, running hop, step and jump.

Division C—50-yard dash, running high jump, 6-potato race, 50-yard hopping contest, one foot.

Division D—50-yard dash, running high jump, five-potato race, 40-yard hopping contest, one foot.

One mile relay, eight boys to a team.

One-half-mile relay, eight boys under eighth grade.

Ribbon prizes shall be given in each event when possible. A championship banner or shield shall be given to the schools having the greatest number of point winners in each division; places to count 5-3-2-1. A special emblem shall be awarded to the school winners of the relay races.

Each school shall be assessed to the amount of one cent for each grammar grade pupil.

THE SEAMAN GUNNERS' BALL.

The Seaman Gunners' class of 1912 entertained friends and acquaintances at the state armory Friday evening. It was a large gathering of women, guests from German ship Bremen and officers and sailors of the American navy. The armory was dressed in bunting, the men having access to a liberal supply of the regulation material, which they put up in effective style. There was a band and an orchestra for dancing, care was given to the selection of the dance orders and Muenchinger served the collation. The members of the class footed the entire bill and seemed to be as happy as those who were accepting their hospitality.

NEW GRAND REGENT PRESENT.

Also Large Number of Guests from Jamestown at Coronet Council's Anniversary.

Coronet Council, Royal Arcanum, celebrated its thirty-fouth anniversary Friday evening with an entertainment and social in Odd Fellows' hall. The anniversary was a little after the date, but the entertainment lost none of its pleasures on that account. The later time was especially interesting because it enabled the members in Newport to be the first Council in the state to entertain the new grand regent, John H. French, and gave him the opportunity to see in Newport the first candidate initiated under his regime.

The anniversary was also interesting because of the presence of a large number of the members of Conanicut Council and their women guests, who made the trip to and from Newport in one of Champion's launches, being cordially received and agreeably entertained by the Newporters. There were also present several members of Pocasset Council of Fall River, which recently entertained the Newporters.

The celebration was preceded by the regular business meeting of the Council, at which the representatives to the Grand Council meeting made reports. One former member was re-instated and a new member initiated.

The entertainment took place in the Council chamber, which was decorated with pots of various colored azaleas in full bloom. The program opened with a selection by Lodter's orchestra, after which Regent Thomas B. Tanner introduced Grand Regent French, who made a pleasing Arcanum speech, devoting a large part of it to the women and what they can do for the order. He also presented to Past Regent William F. Caswall and Orator Ferdinand Ambrust of Conanicut Council Arcanum spoons and badges of honor, complimenting them on having secured new members for their Council and that body on having started so well within the past few weeks and the excellent prospects of the future.

Mr. George William Cutter of Somerville was then introduced and entertained the gathering with songs at the piano, being especially pleasing. Professor Lodter gave a violin solo, Grand Secretary John S. Kellogg made an interesting address, there was a selection by a violin orchestra made up of Professor Lodter and several of his pupils and the program was concluded by a second instalment of Mr. Cutter's recitations and songs. Dr. Henry H. Luther was on the program for a vocal solo, but was detained at home by a severe cold.

After the entertainment the hosts and guests went to the large hall on the second floor, where refreshments were served and there was dancing for two hours to the music of Lodter's orchestra.

The entertainment was in charge of the regular committee of Coronet Council, consisting of William H. Hennen, chairman; John P. Peckham, Ira W. Wilbur, Jr., Fred A. Blom, John R. Austin and Gustave Helgerson, with Regent Tanner as a member ex officio.

PROGRESS BEING MADE.

Arbitration Board May Settle Dispute Between Engineers and Roads.

NEW YORK April 27.—United States Commissioner of Labor Charles P. Neill and Judge Martin A. Knapp, of the United States commerce court believe that their negotiations with the representatives of 50 railroads in the eastern territory and the engineers over the question of increased pay will not prove unproductive, nor decline to discuss the present situation other than to say that progress is being made. The two mediators conferred again this morning with the sub-committee of railway managers and Monday will meet the committee of the engineers. The belief is that the whole dispute will ultimately be settled by an arbitration board, but the roads and engineers are said to be not in accord on how this board would be made up. Neither side is discussing the situation, as the mediators are said to have requested that no statement be made about the negotiations.

PORTSMOUTH.

Miss Hattie K. Hughes Given Miscellaneous Shower by Ladies' Aid of Christian Church.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

Miss Hattie K. Hughes, the only daughter of Mr. William M. Hughes of "Lone Elm Place," in view of her approaching marriage in June to Mr. Louis Arnold of Middletown, was given a miscellaneous shower by the Ladies' Aid of the Christian Church and a few others Friday evening. It was intended, as it proved, to be a complete surprise to Miss Hughes, and although Mr. and Mrs. Hughes knew of the plan they had fine success in keeping it from her. Carriages furnished by members of the company took those without conveyances from the cars at the head of Braman's lane and when all were gathered there were found to be more than 30 in the party.

After greetings music was furnished at intervals from pianola, organ and graphaphone by different guests, and several of the number being singers, a variety of songs and hymns were given with good effect. Sandwiches, cake and ice cream were served. The gifts were both useful and ornamental and included linen, china and the usual collection of desirable articles, making a pretty display.

Miss Hughes, who has been a member of the Christian Church for a number of years and an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society, resigned soon after her engagement to Mr. Arnold, who is of the Protestant Episcopal faith, and was confirmed at St. Mary's by Bishop Perry April 17. Although the church relations have been severed the mutual esteem of both parties remains intact and the good-byes included many wishes for her future happiness.

Mr. Arnold and his mother were among the guests.

Mrs. Francis P. Conway and daughter, Margaret, were guests Friday of Mrs. William B. Anthony.

Mr. Clarence C. Davis is housed by rheumatism.

St. Mary's Guild met this week, with a smaller attendance than usual.

GOVERNMENT AID FOR ROADS.

Seemed to be Visionary When First Suggested by General Coxey.

Newspaper Editorials Have No Effect on Propositions—Major Butt Had No Show for Life.

[Washington correspondence of The News.]

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Government aid for good roads seemed absolutely visionary when first suggested, General Coxey, he of the "commonweal army" fame during the troublous times of the early nineties, proposed that the government should issue $500,000,000 in bonds and use the proceeds in building roads. That was less than 20 years ago. In the same length of time the government will no doubt spend much more on roads than Coxey's proposed half billion. Road building will be expensive, and there is no limit to the amount which can be expended when the government once starts on such an enterprise.

Two powerful editorials in different papers in Washington were published just before the House took action on two important matters. One paper, under the caption "Dirt Road Statesman," jumped with both feet upon Dorsey Shackleford of Missouri because he proposed to have dirt roads built in the rural districts for rural delivery routes. The other was equally denunciatory of Congressman Barnhart of Indiana and his proposition for the printing of the editors, managing editors and stockholders of newspapers and periodicals in each issue of the publication. Within two days after the appearance of these two editorials the House voted overwhelmingly to take affirmative action on both propositions. Thus was the power of the press in Washington exemplified.

"What an outrage that editorial was!" commenced Shackleford. "The 'dirt road statesman' is what they called me. 'Dirt Road Shack' that is what they will call me in my district. Just think how that is going to hurt me in the rural districts, where they do the voting! Why, they couldn't have done me a greater favor. Now as to dirt roads. All the roads in the country must start as dirt roads, but we will keep on improving them. We will keep making better roads, and finally we will have the best roads that can be constructed." Shackleford is right about the demand for good roads. Nothing has been before Congress that was quite as popular.

Those people who told stories about Archie Butt, with army revolver in hand, shooting down people who attempted to rush into the boats ahead of the women when the Titanic was wrecked did not know Archie nor the army revolver. Major Butt probably never carried a revolver except when duty actually required it. It is not likely that he took one to Europe or brought one on board the ship. Besides, an army revolver would have been out of place with him if he desired to carry a gun. His friends are much gratified that all authentic reports showed that Archie was acting like a gentleman and a brave man all the time.

"There is no show on earth for an army officer under such circumstances as Butt was placed," remarked a colonel who has seen a great deal of service. "No army or navy officer could afford to be saved as long as any considerable number of others were lost unless by sheer accident."

Soon after the House adjourned one day and quite a number of members were still in their seats or talking in groups about the House Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, came in with a party of friends. Right down in the area he ran into a group among whom was former Speaker Cannon. The men had to meet and make the best of it. They smiled and attempted to say something funny, but it was hard work. No two men have denounced each other so frequently and viciously as Cannon and Gompers. They have followed each other about in different campaigns and Gompers has often tried to defeat Cannon in his district.

"Look at Uncle Joe and Sam Gompers!" almost shouted one member when the meeting took place. And he had a right to be not only interested but excited.

It is rather strange that two Senators should serve together as long as have Clark and Warren of Wyoming and continue to be such good friends. There is never a break between them, and each looks out for the other's interest with great care. When a political campaign is on in which one is a candidate for re-election the support of the other is assured. It is not the case with any other pair of Senators from the same state. In most states there is either bitter hostility existing or merely the coldest sort of friendship compatible with keeping up appearances.

THE BAND OF THE TITANIC.

[M. R. M.]

Although the words written by Mr. Dantosch need no supplement, so far as they express the appreciation of the unconscious heroism displayed by the band of the Titanic, still it is a musician of the first rank who speaks for brother musicians. Perhaps an added tribute from an outsider may not be considered out of place.

Their unselfish bravery brings to mind a like instance of true heroism displayed by the musicians on United States man of war Trenton in the harbor of Samoa during the great storm of 1889, as her English sister steamed to safety, being anchored farther out. The American band, facing certain death, played its farewell, while the crew waved and shouted "Good luck and Good-bye."

Such actions bring a tightening of the throat and moisture to the eyes of all who reflect what true courage means, courage such as was shown by the men who chose to go down with the ship, regardless of self and home ties, thinking only of cheering and helping by their self-control those in danger! To die like this is not to die in vain! Whose heart strings are not stirred as he reads of the change from lighter music, when apparently only encouragement was needed, to the strains which spoke of parting and death?

Many lines will be written to show the world the pride and tenderness with which we regard the noble dead of all nationalities, who died that others might live, but none can be more deeply felt than these, dedicated to the memory of that gallant band who voiced the Titanic's last good-bye.

CRIMINAL NEGLECT OF SKIN AND HAIR
Cuticura soap and ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little that it is almost criminal not to use them. Think of the suffering entailed by neglected skin troubles—mental because of disfiguration—physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft white hands and good hair. These blessings are often only a matter of a little thoughtful, timely care, viz.—warm baths with Cuticura soap, assisted when necessary by anointings with Cuticura ointment. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. A liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, free, on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 16N, Boston.

TWO MEN KILLED.

Track Repairers, Employes of Boston Elevated, Struck by a Machine.

BOSTON, April 27.—One man is dead and another is dying as the result of being struck by an automobile driven by an unknown man on Boylston street early today. The victims, Thomas Donahue 45 years, married, of South Boston, and John Connolly, aged 35, of South Boston, were repairing tracks for the Boston Elevated and had stepped to the outward bound track to avoid a car when the automobile came speeding along.

According to witnesses the machine was traveling at a very fast speed and it was reported to the police that the chauffeur did not sound the horn or make any effort to swing to the side. The two men were hurled against the electric car with great force and the chauffeur continued on and made his escape. Both injured men were taken to the General Hospital, where Donahue died on arrival.

THE TORPEDO BOARD HERE.

Torpedo boat Morris returned to the Torpedo Station Friday evening from Sag Harbor, having on board the members of the torpedo board—Commander F. L. Norton of the bureau of ordnance chairman; Commander George W. Williams of the Torpedo Station, Lieutenant Commander F. L. Sawyer, inspector at the E. W. Bliss Company's works; Lieutenant F. R. McCrary and Lieutenant C. W. Nimitz. The board had been in session at Sag Harbor three days, during which it conducted a number of torpedo trials. It was again in session at the Torpedo Station today and will probably have another meeting at New London early next week.

which the operator picked up. "My wireless operator, J. Burrant, informed me," continued Captain Moore, "that from teh sound of the signals he judged the Frankfurt was nearest to the Titanic. The last message the Titanic answered from the Olympic, the operator told me, was at 1:50 Monday morning. A few minutes after that the operator told me the Olympic, Baltic and Frankfurt were all trying to get tme Titanic, but could not reach her."

"Did you send any messages from the Mount Temple?" asked Senator Smith.

"No. I kept out. I did not want to interfere with the interchange of messages going on all the time between the Titanic and other vessels, but I steamed ahead and made ready for a rescue if I could reach the scene in time."

"The Carpathia at 1:20 sent messages: 'are you still there? We are firing rockets' Did you see those rockets?" interrupted Senator Smith.

"I saw no rockets at all that night. I thought of sending up rockets myself, but dl not do so because I feared it might divert other ships hurrying to the Titanic."

The witness said the Titanic undoubtedly had not fixed her position properly. He said shem ust have been eight miles farther east than the spot reported. He said his observations taken Monday indicated that the Titanic's actual position probably was 50.09 1-2 west.

Captain Moore said he heard from the Carpathia at 8:30 Monday morning that he had picked up the Titanic's boats and the Titanic had sunk.

"Up to that tim I had to give up hope of sighting the Titanic," said Captain Moore. "I had been steaming around in the ice all night. After I got the news I stayed around until 9 o'clock and then steamer on my course."

"Were there any other vessels in sight at the point where the Titanic is supposed to have gone down?"

"We saw a tramp steamer and a 8 o'clock Monday morning we sighted the Birma. We also sighted the Californian, but the ice was between us."

"What would you do if you met ice at night?" asked Senator Smith.

"I'd stop, sir, and drift with it. My instructions from my company are not to attempt to pass through any ice, no matter how thin it might look."

Senator Smith asked pointedly whether the witnes thought it was wise and iscreet" to run a ship at 21 knots through the night.

Captain Mlloore said it is frequently done an dthat field ice seldom is met with at this time of the year where the Titanic went down.

"Suppose you had been advised that there was ice ahead, would you consider it wise to drive your ship at that speed througth the night?"

"It would be most unwise."

Captain Moore was then excused and the committee took a lunch recess.

DOCUMENTS PREPARED.

Verdicts of "Accidental Death" Ready for Coroner's Jury at Halifax.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, April 27.—Cable ship Mackay-Bennett bearing the bodies of the Titanic victims which have been recovered, will not arrive here until Monday. This was confirmed in a wireless message received from the ship. It was signed simply "Mackay-Bennett" and ran as follows: "Confirm bodies of Astor and Straus on board. Due Monday with 189 bodies." As 205 bodies have been picked up, it is assumed that 16 were so mutilated that burial at sea was necessary.

Documents giving verdicts of "accidental death" were prepared heretoday in readiness for the coroners jury, which will inspect the bodies of the Titanic's dead now on their way here on board cable ship Mackay-Bennett. The names of the drowned will be filled in later, in cases where they can be ascertained.

Stone cutters today began inscribing a number of headstones which will be used to mark the graves of those bodies unidentified or unclaimed, which will be buried in Halifax cemeteries. These headstones will bear a few words telling how the nameless dead met their end.

The White Star line officials persist in their refusal to admit to the dock any besides friends and relatives of the dead. More than 100 of the bereaved are alredy here from various parts of the United States. Arrangements have been made with the express companies to permit of the shipment of bodies, immediately after their identity hive been established, to all parts of Canada and the United States. All the formalities, including crossing the line, will be waived. The bodies that are not identified will be buried in the cemetery of the denominations to which they belong, as far as this can be ascertained.

This morning's train materially increased the number of visitors from the United States, who have come here to await the arrival of the Mackay-Bennett. It also brought a dozen undertakers from St. John, N. B., and Truro, Nova Scotia, to help prepare the identified bodies for burial.

INFORMATION BEING GATHERED.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Members of the commission of the Deutches Museum of Munich, who have been in New York for the past few days, are rapidly gathering a large fund of information and a considerable quantity of exhibits for their institution, which is the national museum of Germany. Among the objects of interest which they will take back with them are one of the sledges used by Admiral Peary in his dash to the North Pole and a model 12 feet high of the new Woolworth building which, for the next years, will rank as the highest building in the world.

The Deutches Museum is Munich's share in a plan evolved upon the establishment of the German empire, of having the government give to each principality some big attraction so as to encourage travel between the various parts of the country. So Munich, the Barvarian capital, has the national museum.

HARBOR DREDGING ALMOST DONE.

Dredger No. 6 of the Daly & Hanan Dredging Company has gone to work on the cut at the south end of the harbor, having completed the dredging at the south end of Goat Island. Mr. Parrish of the engineer office says that unless some shoal places are discovered which will call for attention the dredging will probably be finished next week.

There remain some rock to be removed, which will be done under another contract. Then the harbor will be done to the 18-foot level everywhere except in the extreme south corner.

THE KOENIG ALBERT LAUNCHED.

New German Warship's Turbines Adapted for Coal or Oil Fuel.

DANZIG, Germany April 27.—Battleship Koenig Albert, named for a former king of Saxony, was launched today. The present Saxon king Friedrich August, was present and made a speech, and his sister, Princess Mathilda, christened the vessel.

The Koenig Albert is practically identical with battleships Kaiser, Kaiserin and Friedrich Der Grosse. It has a tonnage of 24,500 and is armed with ten 12-inch and fourteen 6-inch guns. The specifications demand a speed of 21 knots. The warship's turbines are adapted for the consumption of either coal or oil fuel. She has five turrets, three of which are on the center line, fore and aft and the other two are placed amidships. The cost of construction is nearly $12,000,000.

LECTURE AND BUGLE MUSIC.

In the Sunday School room of the First Presbyterian Church Friday evening Mr. H. E. Howard gave two hours of novel entertainment. He opened with a short lecture on his experiences in the army having enlisted in 1861, when only 12 years old. The concert consisted of old and new bugle calls, which he explained, with instrumental pieces at intervals on the bugle, including "Star Spangled Banner," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning," etc. He also gave battlefield imitations on the bass and tenor drum.

HEARING TO BE HELD MAY 6.

A Fourth Attempt Being Made to Liberate Thaw from Matteawan.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., April 27.—A fourth attempt through the agency of the law to liberate Harry K. Thaw from the Matteawan state insane asylum, where he has been imprisoned for the slaying of Stanford White, six years ago, because of insanity, was made today before Justice Keogh of the supreme court in New Rochelle. Thaw was brought down from Matteawan this morning and taken to New Rochelle, where the hearing was scheduled to be held at the home of Justice Keogh.

The hearing today on a writ of habeas corpus was expected to be preliminary in character and it was understood that no witnesses would be examined or exhibits produced. An adjournment for several weeks, in order that counsel for the state may go over the voluminous records in previous habeas corpus proceedings, was predicted.

NEW YORK, April 27, Wall Street—The market opened with Amalgamated Copper 84, American Beat Sugar 70¼, American Smelting and Refining 86⅛, Baltimore & Ohio 109⅝, Canadian Pacific 254½, Chesapeake & Ohio 80⅝, Erie 37½, Great Northern preferred 132⅝, Interborough Metropolitan 19¾ Interborough Metropolitan preferred 59¾, Missouri Pacific 44¼, New York Central 120, Northern Pacific 121⅝, Reading 174 to 173⅝, Southern Pacific 113⅜, Union Pacific 173½, United States steel 71¾, Wabash preferred 21¼, Lehigh Valley 168⅜.

10—Some heaviness was shown in the opening prices of today's market. Reading, the feature the last few days, opened with a block of 5,500 shares at 174 to 173⅝, compared with 175 at yesterday's close. Canadian Pacific yielded a point and a half and there were fractional declines in Lehigh Valley, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and United States Steel. A few gains at the opening were limited almost entirely to specialties and the obscure issues.

11—Prices improved soon after the opening, most of the active issues recovering to a fraction above yesterday's close. The coppers were features of pronounced strength, Amalgamated, Utah and Tennessee copper rising from ½ to 2 points. Reading retained its leadership, but did not renew its spectacular movements of the preceding days. American Writing Paper preferred and Westinghouse Electric were the strongest issues in the special group. The market's general tone was ready at the end of the first hour, with none of its recent feverishness.

Closing—The market closed heavy. Dullness ruled during the greater part of the second hour and the trading drifted into unimportant channels. All the market leaders were heavy under distinct pressure and the only standard issues other than Amalgamated Copper to display any degree of strength was Norfolk & Western. National Biscuit and Texas Company wer among the few strong specialties of that period. Money on call normal; no loans. Time loans firmer; 60 days 3¾ per cent and 90 days 3¾ @ 3½; six months 3½ @ 3¾ per cent.

FOR ARBOR DAY.

Commissioner Ranger's Suggestions for Its Observance in Rhode Island, May 10.

Commissioner of Public Schools Walter E. Ranger has issued the twenty first annual program for the observance of Arbor day in the schools of Rhode Island, May 10. The pamphlet contains the usual message of the commissioner, a suggested program for the observance of the day, pieces, verse and songs relating to tree culture and the value and use of trees, with a number of appropriate songs. Among the longer articles is one on "The Seeds of Trees," by Professor John Barlow of the Rhode Island State College; one on "A Tree Garden," by Ernest K. Thomas, also of the State College, and one on "How to Plant Shade Trees," by J. L. Mowry, commissioner of forestry. Commissioner Ranger's message is as follows:

To the Boys and Girls of Rhode Island Schools:

In observing Arbor day, in keeping the festival of the trees, in celebrating the coming of springtime, may you find an open door set before you leading to the truth, beauty and joy of God's out-of-doors. In the friendly comradeships of the school and in the fellowship of friendly trees, may Arbor day come to you like a day-spring from on high, making all the earth seem glad. In the joy and peace of springtime, "the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands."

"Everything is upward striving;

'Tis as easy now for the heart to be true
As for grass to be green or skies to be blue;
'Tis the natural way of living."

In past years I have sent you many suggestions for the observance of Arbor day, and each year I have purposed to send you in your annual program new and interesting things about trees. You are invited this year particularly to learn about the seeds of trees, to make experiments in their germination, and when practicable to plant a tree garden. This suggestion is not intended to interfere with tree planting, care of trees and shrubs, tree walks, and other Arbor Day practices; but let us remember that all good fruit had its beginning long ago in the seed sown on good ground. One article in our "Nature Lover's Creed" of last year was: "I believe in the seeds of trees, and would gather and plant them, and I would care for the seedlings until they are ready to stand with their brothers in the forests and plains; then the wilderness, and the dry land shall be glad and the desert shall rejoice."

The pupils of each school, holding their own exercises, may find inspiration in the thought that they are not alone in their effort to make some place more beautiful and that, in a common citizenship of the shools, they are united with a hundred thousand Rhode Island boys and girls, as in a grand festival, in celebrating the earth's beauty and goodness and in trying, by planting grove or garden, to make home or school, park or farm, more useful and beautiful. And may each one in this great company learn to know the trees, with all their freshness, beauty, serenity and friendliness.

MIDDLETOWN.

Miss Etta M. Sherman Gives Members of Oliphant Club a Delightful Afternoon.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

It being vacation, Miss Etta M. Sherman, a member of the Middletown teaching force (Wyatt School) was able to entertain at the regular meeting of the Oliphant Club Friday at her home on the East Main road. An extended business session included plans for a reception to be tendered the president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Clovis H. Bowen of Providence, June 21, at the Holy Cross Guild house. The members were requested to keep an account of the magazines and papers which they may distribute during the year, that a report may be sent to the Federation. The hostess, whose subject was "Odd Bits of Travel," gave her guests a most delightful afternoon with reminiscences of her trip last June to California with the Massachusetts Sunday School Association. Her experiences with the number 13 began when she left on June 13, on track 13, and train 13, and this number seemed to appear frequently in many connections during the 28 days trip, never with its customary ill luck; although as Miss Sherman said, "the year is not yet up."

As an introduction to her talk, Miss Sherman read a clever set of verses which appeared in a California paper at the time the delegation was there, entitled "I want to be a Tourist." The first stop of any length was made at Detroit. Thirty-five tunnels were passed through in one day on the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, mostly through cuts in the mountains. A stop of 10 minutes was made at the Royal Gorge on the Arkansas river and specimens of the extremely red stone found there were secured. Extended views were shown of Pike's Peak and its three and a half miles of zog road, and pictures of Inspiration Point at an altitude of 7,965 feet and Exclamation Point and Crystal Park Gateway, 8,360 feet, which were trips taken in automobiles about Pike's Peak. More than 100 post cards were exhibited and many books of tinted views of the Arizona Grand Canyon, Monterey and Del Monte, Salt Lake City and Utah, Golden Gate Park and bay, and the Pasadena ostrich farm. While at the San Gabrielle Mission and at Albuquerque photographs of the party were taken, the Indians congregating by hundreds at the latter place to view them with curiosity.

Among the many souvenirs of the 7,000-mile trip were a collection of ostrich feathers from the Pasadena ostrich farm, a pair of chopsticks from San Francisco Chinatown, Chinese pictures, hand-painted on uncut white velvet; framed Chinese etchings, Mexican opals, grass-linen doilies of drawn work from a Chinese Mission, a gold nugget and gold in "pay dirt," a huge California bean, a tiny piece of silver Mexican money, "Owi" and Abalone shells, the latter showing some in the rough and others the polished surface, leaves of the "live oak," eucalyptus and redwood trees; forget-me-nots from Pike's Peak, and a section of the yucca palm tree. Crystalized ginger was served, similar to that brought from San Francisco Chinatown.

Miss Sherman described the sand storm and spoke of the tall hedges of roses and geraniums seen frequently in California, and of the beautiful trolley rides on the "Road of a Thousand Wonders" in California. The afternoon was too short, both to hear and to see, and it was hoped that Miss Sherman might be able to repeat her talk.

Mrs. Martha C. Bliss will present "An Afternoon with the Magazines," at the next meeting.

The Epworth League weekly service was held Friday evening at the Methodist parsonage subject, "The Man of the Hour;" leader, the pastor, Rev. Edward E. Wells.

The members of the graduating class of the Oliphant School, who were not expecting to hold any social during the two weeks' vacation, were agreeably surprised by an invitation from Miss Beatrice Delangle to meet a few friends Friday evening at her home on Broadway, Newport. A social evening with games passed the time pleasantly and cocoa, cake and candy were served. Each guest was presented with a small bouquet of carnations and roses by Misses Julia and Nellie Paquin of Middletown. Miss Delangle was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Miss Gertrude Delangle, and her brother, Mr. Godfrey Delangle, who later accompanied the Middletown guests in an automobile to their homes.

A PARDON FOR DORSEY.

Story of the Crime for Which He Was Sentenced, a Celebrated Case of 27 Years Ago.

Governor Pothier Friday sent to the senate pardons for Allen W. Dorsey and Dennis, alias "Spike," Murphy, both serving life sentences, the former for the murder of Benjamin J. Burton in this city in October, 1885, and the latter for the murder of Waterman Irons in Providence in August, 1888. The pardons were confirmed by the senate at 9 o'clock and the two men ceased to be prisoners at the moment the senate gave its approval.

Allen W. Dorsey was, with one exception, the longest-termed inmate of the Rhode Island state prison, having been there since July 3, 1886. He was a medical student, having secured a bachelor of arts degree from Lincoln University, a college near Philadelphia, and had completed two of a four year course in the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania at the time of his arrest, when he was 25. In the summer he worked as a waiter in the hotels of this city.

He married Maria Burton, a daughter of Benjamin J. Burton, a well-known citizen. On the morning of October 6, 1885, the police were notified that Mr. Burton had committed suicide. The body was buried and the suicide theory prevailed until, through the efforts of the late Patrick Galvin, the late Dr. Parker and the late Benjamin H. Richards the belief in suicide was overcome, when it was discovered, after taking up the body that there was bread in the dead man's mouth. Mr. Burton had been opposed to the marriage of Dorsey to his daughter, and it finally developed, after a memorable trial and confession by one of Mr. Burton's daughters, that Dorsey shot his father-in-law while the latter was at breakfast.

Dorsey was sentenced July 1, 1886, to life imprisonment, and his wife received a similar sentence, as an accomplice. The only sister of Mrs. Dorsey, Emily Burton, was also sent to prison for life as an accessory. Miss Burton died after a few years and shortly afterward Mrs. Dorsey died.

Dorsey has always been regarded as a model prisoner and assisted the officials in teaching the other prisoners and in training the choir and having charge of the music. He was in charge of the clothing room for many years, during which time he acted as librarian and organist. A few years ago he was made bookkeeper in one of the shops, where he has since been employed.

Several efforts have been made to secure a pardon for Dorsey, but these have been repeatedly opposed by the relatives and friends of the late Mr. Burton and his many friends here, who regarded the murder as of a particularly deliberate nature. Dorsey having involved two women in a crime which was unusual in the history of the state. The surviving member of the Burton family, Mr. C. Howard Burton, opposed the pardon of Dorsey for many years, but since his death two or three years ago other influences seem to have been more effectual and the pardon has at last been secured.

TWO SMALL SKETCHES.

"Madame De Portinent" and "A Rag Bag Social" Features of Second Baptist Entertainment.

A cake, apron and candy sale, salad supper and entertainment was given in Young Men's Christian Association hall Friday afternoon and evening by the Women's Association of the Second Baptist Church. For the entertainment the hall was filled to capacity and an excellent program was provided. A piano duett by Misses Emily Owens and Winifred Stinner was the opening number. A little sketch entitled "Madame de Portinent's School was well received, the cast being:

Madame De Portinent,
T. Gertrude Haas.
Mabel Frolics, Mary C. Austin
Gertrude Smiles, Elsie Oxx
May Friskey, Helen King
Jennie Slow, Nellie Mumford
Bridget, a servant, Rowena MacLellan

A piano duet by Misses Gladys Pfanenmiller and Helen Taylor and a piano selection by Miss Winifred Stinner followed. Mr. W. G. Stockwell gave a selection on hand bells and then came the principal sketch of the evening, "A Rag Bag Sociable." The participants were attired in clothing dug out from many an attic and old-fashioned closet, while the conversation quite suggested a women's sewing party. The dialogue was interspersed with solos and choruses. There was good comedy and the whole act was well carried out, reflecting credit on Miss T. Gertrude Haas, in charge of putting on both sketches. The cast was as follows:

Mrs. Winters, the hostess,
Rowena MacLellan
Betsey Winters and Maria Winters, her daughters,
Marion Manuel and Elsie Wilcox
Miss Jemina Rush, T. Gertrude Haas
Miss Angelina Doolittle,
Grace Lansley
Mrs. Bassett, Sadie Howard
Mrs. Collins, Emma Barker
Mrs. Salina Grey,
Myrtle Pfanenmiller
Mrs. Barbara Allen and Mrs. Harriet Allen, twins,
Helen King and Grace Easton
Mrs. Susana Bassett,
Gladys Pfanenmiller
Mrs. Martha Ann Hall, Marion Hall
Mrs. Eliza Hall, Nellie Mumford
Mrs. Jane Tompkins, Ella Sandford
Miss Jane Tompkins, Mary C. Austin
Miss Amanda Tompkins, Elsie Oxx

DENTAL INSPETION IN THE SCHOOLS.

The Board of Health at its regular meeting Friday evening had another conference with the committee from the Dental Society—Drs. Brackett, Howard and Robinson—in regard to the dental inspection of school children. The Dental Society at a meeting has gone over the matter in detail and the committee put before the Board of Health the result of the discussion. The board and the dentists are trying to formulate the best possible plan for putting the new project into operation.

WISEMAN—ROONEY.

The marriage of Mrs. Joanna Rooney, widow of John B. Rooney, to Mr. John M. Wiseman took place quietly at St. Mary's rectory Thursday evening, Rev. William B. Meenan officiating. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Catherine Harrington and Mr. Edward Dunn. Mr and Mrs Wiseman left later in the evening on the train for Boston, and after a short honeymoon trip will return here to reside.

RE-APPOINTED POSTMASTER.

William F. Caswell to Serve for Second Term of Four Years at Jamestown Office.

The United States Senate Friday confirmed the nomination of William F. Caswell as postmaster of Jamestown, he having been re-appointed for a second term of four years by President Taft last Wednesday. Mr. Caswell was first named as postmaster of Jamestown in May, 1908, succeeding the late John B. Landers. Before assuming the duties of that office he had been town clerk for 17 years, tax collector for six years and had served in the state legislature six years, both in the house of representatives and in the senate.

WILLIAM F. CASWELL.

He is one of the best known citizens of Jamestown and is well known also in Newport. He is a member of Excelsior Lodge of Odd Fellows of this city and one of the most active members of Conanicut Council, Royal Arcanum having served that organization as regent and later as treasurer, holding the latter position at the present time.

CHORUS GIRL SUPERSTITIONS.

Some of the Things Which Members of Theatrical Companies Will or Will Not Do.

Miss Ethel Clayton of "The Country Boy," who has risen from the ranks of the chorus girl to the realm of leading lady, discloses some of the secrets of the dressing room as follows:

A horrible and terrifying presence stands at the stage door of every theatre and each little chorus girl who goes therein bows and cringes, for the monster's name is Superstition. "This shall you reverence," says he, and points to a black cat. So the black cat is given the seat of honor in the dressing room, giving promise of happiness and luck to whomsoever he clings to and rubs lovingly against. Whomsoever the cat ignores means irrevocable failure, whatever the play may be.

Chorus girls will not pass each other on the stairs, going to or from their dressing rooms. The one at the top or foot calls to the other to wait until she reaches the last step. To say "thank you" for a pin is to invite a quarrel; to hang anything on the outside door knob is to court accidents and death; to buy one's own make-up box, especially the rabbit's paw used for rouging the face, signifies that one will be compelled to buy success instead of meriting it. Half the charm and luck of the rabbit's foot comes from finding it, and to find one in a churchyard or a cemetery presages such luck as can hardly be dreamed of. To open an umbrella in the dressing room, especially to hold it over one's head, prophesies a deluge of misfortunes, illness and adverse criticism. Opening the umbrella in the outer air with the point downward signifies that all difficulties will be put under foot.

To put one's shoes or slippers, however dainty they may be on a shelf higher than one's pillow surely portends the condition described as being "heels over head" in debt. No real chorus girl will sign a contract on Friday or the thirteenth of the month, or will live in a house with the number 13 on the door or play in a company of 13. To whistle in the dressing room is also significant of failure on the the stage, and to be associated in a chorus with a girl who is cross-eyed invites a stigma predictive of all sorts of evils, which last not only during one production but all during one's career.

CONDITION OF STONE BRIDGE.

Will Soon be Entirely Out of Use Through Failure of Arches.

Engineer Recommends Re-Construction and the Continued Restriction of Travel.

The recent report of George B Francis, the consulting engineer who was employed by the special commission of the legislature to examine the condition of Stone Bridge, at Tiverton, is in part as follows:

"I think that the principal trouble is very largely, if not entirely, due to the thrust of the three masonry arches on either side of the draw opening, which is causing horizontal movements toward the opening and crowding the two channel piers which support the steel structure. If these arches are allowed to remain the trouble will gradually increase, resulting ultimately in complete failure or fail of some of the arches, which will put the bridge entirely out of use.

"I would recommend the removal of these six arches and the intermediate piers which support them, down to about low-water level; the re-building of the intermediate piers, the re-modeling of the end masonry walls and the placing of sufficient steel plate girders to carry the roadway, tracks for car traffic, sidewalks and fences. These piers will then have nothing but vertical loads to carry, for which they have already shown themselves sufficient, and it is not probable that there will be any further horizontal movements after the arches are removed.

"It will undoubtedly be necessary to do some work on the steel structure and draw, so that it will operate freely and safely. A new locking device ought to be put in so that when the two opposite leaves of the draw are down they will give firm support where they join.

"The deck on top of the new steel girds to carry the pavement should be either a heavy 6-inch or 8-inch timber flooring, water-proofed on top, or a re-inforced concrete slab. A thoroughly creosoted wooden block pavement laid on sand cushion would make the best pavement on top of the timber flooring, and a granolithic surface would be best on a concrete slab.

"I would recommend that the travel over the bridge be restricted as it is at present, until plans are made for the removal of the arches and the substitution of bridging of girder type over the openings, and continue to so restrict the travel until all the new material is on the site ready to be put in place.

"Probably the bridge could be used, as at present, until next fall, and the construction of the new spans be started and finished next winter. During the reconstruction travel would have to be by ferry, as it was when the present bridge was under construction."
